

University of Science and Technology Beijing

School profile

The history of USTB can be traced back to the establishment of the Beiyang Western Learning Academy in 1895 as the first mining and metallurgy discipline in modern Chinese history. Since its establishment in 1952, the University has developed into a national key university directly under the Ministry of Education with engineering as its main focus and multi-disciplinary development in engineering, science, management, arts, economics and law. In 1997, the university was one of the first universities to enter the national "211 Project" construction. In 2006, it became one of the first universities to build the "985 Project" superior discipline innovation platform; In 2014, the "Steel Common Technology Collaborative Innovation Center" led by the school was successfully selected into the national "2011 Plan". In 2017, the university was selected as a national "double first-class" construction university.
